Embassy REIT to raise ₹2,000 cr via bond sale

REUTERS
Mumbai, July 16

EMBASSY OFFICE PARKS REIT is in talks with bankers to raise ₹2,000 crore via issuance of five-year corporate bonds, three sources aware of the matter said on Wednesday.

The real estate investment trust will look to close the funding round before the end of this month, they said, requesting anonymity as talks are private. The debt sale could attract strong demand from mutual funds as well as some insurance companies, as the notes are rated 'AAA' by Crisil, they said. Embassy REIT will tap the bond market for the second time this year after it raised ₹750 crore in June through the sale of 21-month bonds at a coupon of 6.9650%, payable on a quarterly basis.

"Since the company is targeting a larger quantum as compared to the June issue, it has gone for a slightly-higher tenure to attract demand from insurance companies," one of the sources said. The coupon on this bond issue has not been decided. The ratings continue to factor in exposure to refinancing risks and susceptibility to volatility in the real estate sector, resulting in fluctuations in rental rates and occupancy, Crisil said. Currently, the company has outstanding bonds worth around ₹8,500 crore, the rating agency said.

10 AMCs line up long-short equity funds

AT LEAST 10 Indian and foreign asset managers plan to launch higher-risk, long-short equity funds to wealthier investors after the regulator approved the strategy earlier this year, according to executives at these firms and public filings.

Under the new rules, which kicked in on April 1, mutual funds can now offer long-short equity funds, where fund managers take both long- and short-positions, under a new category called "specialised investment fund" with a minimum investment size of ₹10 lakh. ICICI Prudential Mutual Fund, Quant Mutual Fund, SBI Mutual Fund and IIFL Mutual Fund already have approvals to launch the product, according to public disclosures and spokespeople of these firms. Edelweiss MF and Mirae Asset Investment Managers are awaiting approvals to launch a hybrid long-short fund and an equity long-short fund, respectively. —REUTERS

Festive hiring to rise 15-20%: Report

IN TERMS OF geographical trends, the seasonal hiring activity is more robust in tier-II cities as compared to metros. For instance, cities such as Lucknow, Jaipur, Coimbatore, Nagpur, Bhubaneswar, Mysuru, and Varanasi are witnessing a 42% increase in demand, whereas the hiring uptick in metros such as Delhi-NCR, Mumbai, Bengaluru, Chennai, Hyderabad, Kolkata, and Pune is about 19% more as compared to the same period last year. "There's growing traction in emerging hubs such as Kanpur, Kochi, and Vijayawada where the compensations are expected to rise at 18-22% in comparison with 12-15% increase in metro markets. Encouragingly, 23% more women are participating in this seasonal hiring wave compared to previous years, driven by a rising preference for flexible, short-term roles," the report added.

The hiring activity in each sector has its own drivers. In logistics and delivery sector, where the projected rise will be 30-35%, companies are scaling up last-mile operations in preparation for peak festive demand. In the BFSI sector, firms are significantly ramping up field force deployments for credit card sales and POS (point of sale) installations, particularly across tier-II and -III cities. However, e-commerce and retail will continue to dominate the job scenario by creating 35-40% of the total seasonal jobs. "Employers are increasingly prioritising multilingual capabilities, customer-handling skills, and digital proficiency, especially for roles in in-store sales, credit card promotions, and delivery fulfillment," it said. Deepesh Gupta, director and head of general staffing at Adecco India, said that the focus now is not just on scale but on candidate experience, structured mobilisation, and long-term workforce integration. "With deployment timelines compressed and retention rates improving steadily, seasonal hiring is no longer a stop-gap but a strategic workforce layer, particularly across digital commerce, retail, and financial services," he said.

Even though the seasonal roles are traditionally being created to fulfil short-term needs, they are increasingly becoming gateways to formal employment. "Many employers in retail and fintech are now building structured career pathways for high-performing seasonal workers, underlining the strategic shift toward viewing short-term hiring as a long-term talent pipeline," the report noted.

Mobile stores take hyperlocal delivery route to beat q-comm

FINANCING REMAINS ANOTHER critical barrier for q-commerce platforms. While quick-commerce operators typically run an inventory-light franchise model, they often lack partnerships with NBFCs for flexible EMI options, something that traditional retailers have integrated deeply into their sales processes.

"Around 50% of Sangeetha's current sales are EMI-based. Even users without a formal credit history can avail EMI options in-store through partners like Bajaj Finserv," added Chandra. "That's something online platforms can't offer easily, because they lack the infrastructure for in-person verification or walk-in support."

This financing capability not only makes devices more affordable, especially in lower-income segments, but also drives volume sales in smaller cities and towns, markets that q-commerce hasn't fully cracked yet.

The challenges have already begun to show. Swiggy Instamart and Blinkit, two of the most aggressive quick-commerce players, have retreated from premium offerings to instead list budget-friendly models like JioPhone and Nokia.
